for the

IGU CDES Conference

Organized by Peking University

Asia in the Transforming Global Economy

June 21 - 22, 2024, Beijing, China

Call for Papers

The world economy has radically changed over the past decade, especially in these uncertain times (COVID-19, technological disruptions, de-globalization, climate change, etc.). Against this background, Asian regions have become more and more important in the world economy and are increasingly at the center of various global crises and disruptions. This is coupled with some complex challenges for contemporary governance approaches (e.g., political alliance and state power) and institutional constructions when preventing the social and economic conflicts and inequality among various Asian regions. We also notice that the emerging technologies (e.g., Artificial General Intelligence and green technologies) have been crucial in the transformation of Asian economies.

While scholars have already directed their attention to the above aspects that are expected to deeply reshape the Asian and global socio-economic structure, a deeper understanding is still required. For instance, what key factors in Asian regions, including both economic and non-economic factors, are influencing the ongoing global economic transformation? How do different actors in Asia, such as firms, civil society, and governments, develop new roles in this transformative process? How does the process of global economic transformation decelerate (or accelerate) existing inequalities among regions in Asia?

This conference aims to bring together scholars interested in conceptualizing and empirically exploring the dynamics of Asian regions in the context of the transforming global economy. The contributions may explore, but should not be limited to, the following issues:

- New theoretical and methodological approaches to study the current transformation of economies emerging in Asian regions
- New roles of different actors in Asia during the transformation of (global) production network (GPN) and value chains (GVCs)

- Foreign direct investment (FDI) and multinational companies (MNCs) to and from Asia and their global and local impacts
- Transformation of economic sectors (e.g. agriculture, manufacturing, services) in Asia in relation with global economy
- The future evolutionary trajectories of different Asian regions in connection with GPN
- Existing and emerging economic inequality among different regions in Asia under the transformation of global economy
- The impacts of emerging new (e.g. Industry 4.0) technologies or the fourth industrial revolution on global economic transformation, particularly the potential changes in Asian and global economic structures
- Challenges of recent years (e.g. climate change, energy crisis, war conflicts) and their impact on Asian economies
- Urban and regional economic development policy and governance: role of institutions
- New development and innovation models for Asian core or peripheral regions
- Planning strategies to assist more sustainable economic growth in Asia
